WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

A low pressure trough will arrive off shore later today then move inland and linger for the latter half of the week. Some gusty S to SW winds will develop this afternoon near and east of the Cascade/Sierra crest, but when the trough moves a bit further inland Wednesday, more moderately strong, gusty north wind is expected to develop in the Sacramento Valley/Foothills area leading to a marginal "High Risk" Significant Fire Potential situation returning there with lighter winds than we have now but just as low relative humidity (RH). The incoming trough will be dry, but our northern areas at least will see RH increase quite a bit while the southern half of the region remains quite dry. All areas will have low RH over the weekend as the air mass over the region remains/becomes very dry.

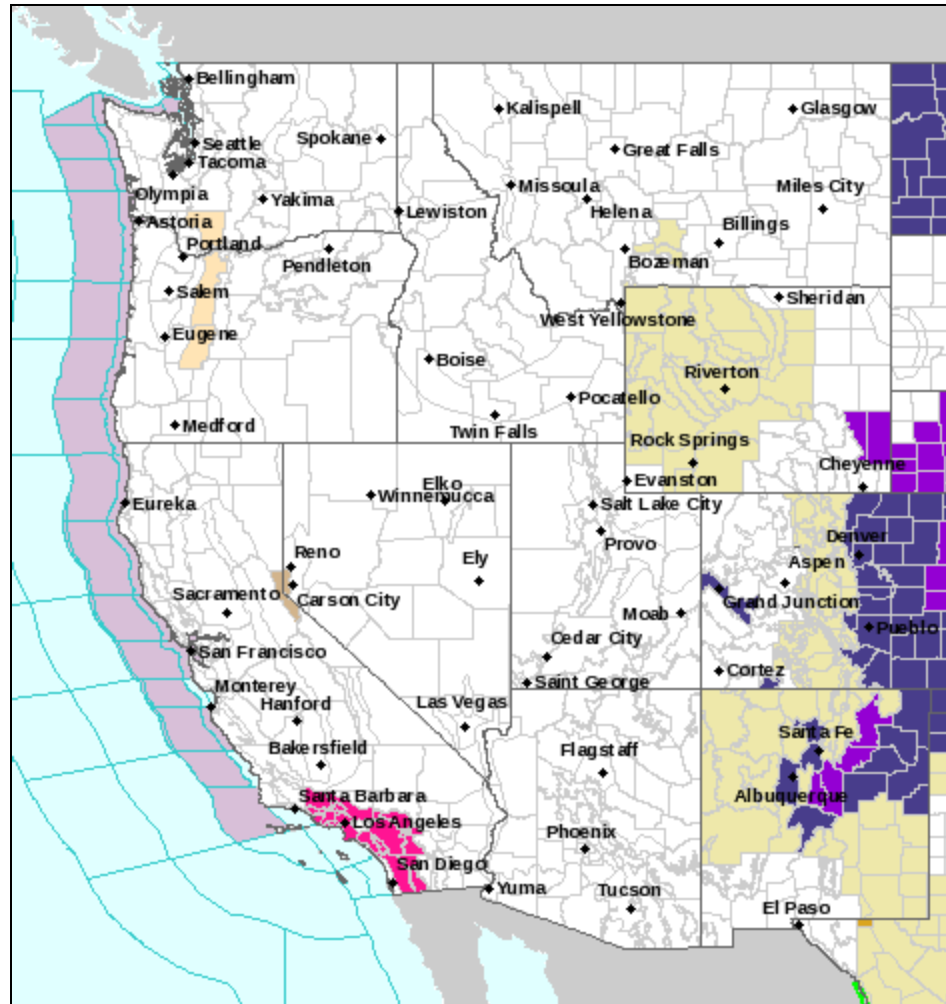

The warmest inland areas will be near 80 for the next few days and then mostly into the low to mid 70s Wednesday through Friday. Temperatures there will warm rapidly back to around 80 for the weekend.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Very dry through Tuesday

Winds will decrease and become light this morning. Minimum humidity will be in the single digits and teens today. A weak ridge of high pressure aloft over California will bring a little above normal temperatures to the valleys today, with upper 70s and 80s. Temperatures will cool to the mid 50s to mid 60s over the mountains and then warm to the mid 60s to mid 70s Tuesday as winds become light. A Pacific trough will move into the West Coast bringing a cooling trend and an increase in humidity Wednesday through Friday. Westerly winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph will surface across the mountain ridges and desert passes Wednesday morning through Friday afternoon. A strong ridge of high pressure aloft will build northward out of Mexico bringing a warming trend and low humidity to the region Saturday through early next week. There will be north winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph over much of Santa Barbara County and the Grapevine Friday night. Winds will become northeast 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph Saturday morning through Saturday afternoon across the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California. Winds will be light Saturday night through early next week.
